About Newberg, Oregon

Newberg is the gateway to Oregon's Willamette Valley, the first town on Highway 99W driving from Portland — the famous route to hundreds of vineyards and wineries. Over 65 wineries claim an address in Newberg itself, ranging from Oregon Pinot Noir pioneers like Adelsheim and Rex Hill wineries with bucolic estate vineyard sites, to seven downtown tasting rooms within walking distance of one another. In addition to being a prime location for grape growing, Newberg is also home to hazelnut farms, fruit orchards, dairies, and flower farms (including numerous u-pick lavender farms). Newberg's charming, relaxed, walkable downtown is dotted with owner-operated restaurants, cafés, galleries, and shops, as well as the Chehalem Cultural Center, George Fox University, and the Hoover-Minthorn House, the only presidential site in Oregon. Newberg's peaceful, picturesque surroundings can be enjoyed through vineyard tours, river paddles, hikes, golf, cycling, scenic drives, or a simple picnic in the park.

Location: Newberg is 22 miles from downtown Portland, in the northwest corner of the Willamette Valley, within Yamhill County.

Newberg sits in a triangle-shaped valley, bordered by the Chehalem Mountain Range, the Dundee Hills, and the Willamette River.

Population: The city has a population of 23,600.

History: The first residents of what is now known as Newberg were members of the native Kalapuya tribe. They were semi-nomadic, and established the Willamette River as a thoroughfare for transportation and trade. In the 1830s, European settlers followed the river to Newberg and established the town as a territorial trading center. In 1841, Willamette Valley settlers convened for the first time in Champoeg, southeast of Newberg (what is now Champoeg State Park), to discuss the wolves that were menacing their settlements. These meetings led to the formation of Oregon's provisional government in 1843. Newberg was named in 1869 by its first postmaster, Sebastian Brutscher, after his hometown of Neuberg, Germany. Quakers played a large role in the establishment and growth of Newberg, including the founding of George Fox University in 1885 (originally named Friends Pacific Academy), the first Christian college in Oregon. In 1885, a young Herbert Hoover arrived in Oregon to live with his aunt and uncle, John and Laura Minthorn. He grew up in Newberg before going on to become the 31st president of the United States. Newberg is the site of the only presidential landmark in Oregon: The Hoover-Minthorn House, a museum of the Hoover residence opened in 1955.
